Man Mother

by Laurie Reiche

for Paul & his grown son, Devin

This is how the man can be the mother:
heart bravely scrolled wide open like the Torah at high holidays; blood beating warm toward the child-man he's raised with the mother.

This is how the man can be the mother:
rosy skin going ghost-white at the thought of pain tainting his man-child; being soft as the fertile sea, carrying its tide-blanket onto shore, carefully covering the cold, hard sleeping earth with affectionate waves.

And this is how the man can be the mother:
man to man; father to son; face to face mouth speaking words of love.
