When we are distinguished grey-haired alumnae coming back to see our grand-daughters graduate, we shall be glad that we were here during the first ten years of the College's growth. Our grand-daughters will take for granted the position and traditions of the College. They will proudly uphold the traditions as their own, but we will say that we helped to make those traditions. Ours was the thrilling task of creating the spirit and personality of the College; we were here when the Dominican College of San Rafael was leaving the convent boarding school stage and becoming a woman's College, when the freedom and privileges granted us were startling for a convent college. They will fail to see why such privileges were startling. They will enjoy them; but they will not know the excitement of the privileges yielded as a daring experiment. They will ask how Dominican College grew to be the place they know. Then we shall say that there were two elements in her character. First, there was the spirit of true learning that the Faculty gave the College and the spirit of freedom with which we began. We shall tell how from the first the ideal of the College was to have a Student Body that didn't have to be told what to do and what not to do, that the founders courageously stuck to that ideal even when it seemed that people did need a hundred little rules with penalties to keep them in order. Then we shall say that we did the rest ourselves, that we returned such love and loyalty that our College could not help growing.

For if Dominican College is to become the place we dream of, it must be because of the love and loyalty of the Students. The faculty and administration have given us all they can, they have given us a lovely place to live in and a wealth of opportunity, but it is the students who must build up the spirit of the College.

The Meadowlark

Just at present we feel much too sophisticated to love our College. We feel that is is a bit young to be enthusiastic about anything. We haven't come to our College because it is a family tradition; our College isn't that old. We have chosen it deliberately because it offers us what we want in music or English or mathematics or because we yearn for knowledge.

We should rather live at home, but Dominican College is what we want. We view our Alma Mater objectively, not as if she were our own. Most of us take all she offers and return nothing. It is time for us to lose that attitude. We must return something for all we receive. It is only when we have done something for our College that we feel that it is ours. The people that give up week-ends to rehearse a play, that tear their hair trying to get the MEADOWLARK out, that hold Student Body offices and lie awake at night over the mental and spiritual welfare of each student can never view their college impersonally again. They have done something out of love for the College. They belong to the College and the College belongs to them.

When we stop thinking of Dominican College merely as an institution with beautiful grounds and exceptional opportunities, and begin to think of it as our own College it will cease to be a new College with great possibilities and begin to be the College of which our grand-daughters will be proud.

Editorial

Art and literature . . . can overcome man's unfortunate trait of learning only through his own experience, unaffected by that of others. From man to man . . . , art communicates whole the burden of another's long life experience with all its hardships, colors, and vitality, recreating in the flesh what another has experienced, and allowing it to be acquired as one's own.

Alexander Solzhenitsyn
NOBEL LECTURE

A real tradition is not the relic of a past that is irretrievably gone; it is a living force that animates and informs the present . . . Far from implying the repetition of what has been tradition presupposes the reality of what endures. It appears as an heirloom, a heritage that one receives on condition of making it bear fruit before passing it on to one's descendants . . . Tradition thus assures the continuity of creation.

Igor Stravinsky

Therefore, for a discussion on the subject of friendship, I advise you to apply to those who profess that art; all that I can do is to urge you to put friendship before all things human; for nothing is so conformable to nature and nothing so adaptable to our fortunes whether they be favorable or adverse.

To every man the tenure of his friendships ever remains settled and sure, so that even if there should be a continuance of those things which are, so to speak, the gratuities of fortune, yet life unadorned and unattended by friends could not be pleasant.

It is an ironic fact that in this nuclear age, when the horizon of human knowledge and human experience has passed far beyond any that any age has ever known,
that we turn back at this time to the older source of wisdom and strength, to the words of the prophets and the saints,
who tell us that faith is more powerful than doubt,
that hope is more potent than despair,
and that only through the love
that is sometimes called charity can we conquer those forces
within ourselves
and throughout all the world that threaten the very existence of mankind.

The quality of mercy is not strained;
It droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven
Upon the place beneath: it is twice blest, -
It blesseth him that gives and him that takes:
'Tis mightiest in the mightiest; it becomes
The throned monarch better than his crown:
His sceptre shows the force of temporal power
The attribute to awe and majesty,
Wherein doth sit the dread and fear of kings;
But mercy is above the sceptered sway, -
It is enthroned in the hearts of kings,
It is an attribute to God himself;
And earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice.

Very often one must first overcome laziness and lack of inclination. Then there are various impediments. Sometimes victory comes easily, sometimes inspiration entirely escapes me. But I believe it is the duty of an artist never to submit, for laziness is a strong human trait, and nothing is more harmful to an artist than to let laziness get the better of him. One cannot afford to sit and wait for inspiration; she is a guest who does not visit the lazy but comes to those who call her.

Once upon a time there was a small person who always did foolish things but only did them once. One day, after this small person had did something that was foolish, he was asked by a large, grown up, exasperated person, "why, oh small person, who do you do all these foolish things?" AND the small person answered "do we not learn and become wiser through our foolish actions?" and the large grown up person replied, "why yes, but . . ." "well, then," interrupted the small person, "that is why I do them, I want become wise so that I will never do the foolish thing twice. I want to be wise so that when I become a large grown up person I will be all the better." "but, when, small person, did this occur to you?" and the small person answered with a small sad smile, "when I made my first foolish mistake."

Peace, and be at peace with your thoughts and visions.
These things had to come to you and you to accept them.
This is your share of the eternal burden,
The perpetual glory. This is one moment,
But know that another
Shall pierce you with a sudden painful joy
When the figure of God's purpose is made complete.
You shall forget these things, toiling in the household,
You shall remember them, droning by the fire
When age and forgetfulness sweeten memory
Only like a dream that has often been told
And often been changed in the telling.
They will seem unreal.
Human kind cannot bear very much reality.

To each his dulcinea,
That he alone can name;
To each a secret hiding place,
Where he can find the haunting face,
To light his secret flame.
For with his dulcinea,
Beside him so to stand,
A man can do quite anything,
Out fly the bird upon the wing,
Hold moonlight in his hand.
Yet if you build your life on dreams,
It's prudent to recall,
A man with moonlight in his hands:
There's nothing there at all.
There is no dulcinea,
She's made of flame and air.
And yet how lovely life would seem
If every man could weave a dream
To keep him from despair.
To each his dulcinea.
Though she's only flame and air.

IN MY LIFE

There are places I remember, all my life, though some have changed.
Some forever, not for better,
Some are gone and some remain.
All these places have their meaning
With lovers and friends. I still can recall
Some are dead and some are living
In my life I've loved them all . . .

For people and things that went before,

In my life, I'll love you more.

Each life lives unto itself
 . . . yet serves eternity.
Upon all lives each life depends - the lives of flowers and birds - of trees, and man -
 the very earth from which life grows is recreated by that life.
Each shall develop unto itself - and from within must ever grow - for when a thing shall cease to grow it ceases then - to be a life -
 it grows to live -
 it lives to grow -
 - an independent life -
And yet - interdependent upon all life.

SELF-ACTUALIZERS - are creative, original, realistic people absorbed in life and growth, making full use of their talents, capacities, and potentialities, while retaining the ability to appreciate again and again, freshly and naively, the basic goods of life, with awe, pleasure, wonder and even ecstasy . . .

It holds, that the function of education, the goal of education - the human goal, the goal so far as human beings are concerned - is ultimately the self-actualization of a person, the becoming fully human, the development of the fullest height that the human species can stand up to or that the particular individual can attain. In a less technical way, it is helping the person to become the best that he is able to become. If education does not do that, it is useless.

FOR SISTER NICHOLAS: WHEELING

The air goes by laughing
And dragging behind it a veil
And a quick benediction of sleeve.

I do not remember
Rejoicing so much in a passing
Moment. - Once, in rainlight,

By a mottled barn,
I smiled to see a swallow,
Diving out of sight. But now,

Somehow, this vision,
This unworldly blur of grace,
Above the humming earth,

Relieves the gravity,
We live with. Where the light
Recovers, nothing is left

For heavy speech. Even
The road seems pleased,
And follows.
