Compassion Prisoner

Jessica Curlett
Dominican University of California

Survey: Let us know how this paper benefits you.

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://scholar.dominican.edu/tuxedolit/vol2011/iss2/1

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by the School of Liberal Arts and Education at Dominican Scholar. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Tuxedo Archives by an authorized editor of Dominican Scholar. For more information, please contact michael.pujals@dominican.edu.
Compassion Prisoner

Jessica Curlett

I wish I could tell you
What’s on my mind,
But I’m not even sure.
When I figure it out
I’ll let you know
But I doubt you’ll even be there to listen Even,
If that is all I ask for.
A moment of your time
A second of your life
A minute of compassion
That use to be so great
I couldn’t escape it.
But now look at it,
Withered and in pain
Trapped in a cage
Where you put it
Begging for food and water
Of how it got here.
Oh it’s existing,
But just surviving.
It’s not living,
It’s closer to dying
And even still
You won’t give
One minute,
One second,
one instant of your time
to heal it;
make it better
with just one reassurance
that this won’t last forever.
But even right now
You’re not listening,
You’re present
But you might as well
Be effervescent
For how real you are
Whenever you come around.
And I use to love that sound
Of your voice
But I barely remember it
Because compassion prisoners
Don’t get the convenience
Of music for their souls.