

2017

Van Gogh Swirls

Jessica Lim
Dominican University of California

Survey: Let us know how this paper benefits you.

Recommended Citation

Lim, Jessica (2017) "Van Gogh Swirls," The Tuxedo Archives: Vol. 2011 , Article 3.
Available at: <https://scholar.dominican.edu/tuxedolit/vol2011/iss2/3>

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by the School of Liberal Arts and Education at Dominican Scholar. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Tuxedo Archives by an authorized editor of Dominican Scholar. For more information, please contact michael.pujals@dominican.edu.

VAN GOGH SWIRLS

Jessica Lim

There is a blankness that rests in your eyes
There are times when the eyes can't see, when the mouth can't speak.
There is a blankness in your eyes, and a solitude within
There are times when you look up
And all there is are Van Gogh swirls
And the illumination of skies far away.
She looks at you and you don't know what to say
You look around and there is black paint splattered on the walls of your heart
You look around and the ground your bare feet walk on is as rough as your calloused hands
You look on
And in the distance lies the future you've always dreamed of reaching laced with the unreachable, unattainable qualities of the naiveté you lost years ago.
You look on into the reflection in the water at the lies that have become your reality and you saw everything as truth
And she looks at you still, and yet your mouth has shut, stapled down by the incorrigible boy of you that knows you have sinned.
And yes, you have sinned.
You have sinned.
And she wants to help. She looks at you with the saddest eyes you've ever seen
And for once
You finally look at her and say
"I have sinned"
"I have sinned".