

Tanka and Micropoetry

By Mary Hohlman

in the quiet
of late spring night
hearing the songs
of a thousand stars

among the cobwebs
that lie in the hayloft
a few rays of sun
flowing through your hair and to my lips that spring day