The Left Bank Brasseries: The Evolution of a French-Inspired Restaurant

Abstract
Restaurant success comes from great internal and external factors. Internal factors include menu, financial support, and staff. External factors include location, market segment, competitors, and general economic environment (Jalis, Kassim and Mohamad, 2012). This study attempts to unveil how the Left Bank Brasseries, a well-respected restaurant in Marin County, Northern California, has sustained its success for over twenty years. Using primary data, this study examines the restaurant’s best management practices and customer satisfaction levels to determine the core competencies of the company.

Introduction
Lack of capital is a major contributing factor for restaurant failure. A restaurant without a sufficient amount of capital and cash flow will not survive because of three major expenses: overhead, labor, and food cost. Performance is measured in terms of two aspects: company’s market success factors (e.g., their image, their levels of customer and employee satisfaction), and their financial performance (Llach et al., 2013). Accurate and consistent internal management decisions may allow a restaurant to maintain financial stability. Managing and developing strong customer relationships overtime can help create a loyal customer base that will likely translate into healthy and sustainable growth for the business.

“Food presentation, food taste, seating arrangement, interior design, music, reliable services and employee competency are the key determinants of customer satisfaction” (Ponnam and Balej, 2014). A successful fine dining restaurant competes on differentiation, not just on price. The focus is on consistently delivering quality and value to the customer. Owners and managers must make it happen everyday with high energy, passion, and love for the business (Parsa et al., 2005).
